Elector Blair appeared in city court yesterday afternoon and entered a complaint on himself for scraping with Peter Bombard, in which the latter is said to have received a badly disfigured eye. Blair was charged with breach of the peace, to which he pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $5, with costs of $5.00. Before Blair was allowed to plead, the grand juror investigated the case and found Bombard was not anxious to complain on Blair, but intimated that he might sue him for private damages.

"The Modern Prodigal" a story in symbolism, showing the result of youth's egotism. Egotism is the most dangerous quality man can cultivate, for it makes us over-confident of our strength of purpose. Self esteem is a fault that rarely goes unpunished. How few of us realize what weaklings we are without the guiding hand of the great Master of all. In the opening of this Biograph subject, we find the cellophane youth as he points towards the city's spires, exclaiming to his dear old mother, "Mother, there, in the big city, is my sphere. There will I turn the world over." Off he goes cityward, ambitious and presumptuous, and perhaps, we may add, reckless. Alas! the city's whirl is quite a change from the simple, quiet life in the country, and the youth falls a victim to the snares that beset the unsophisticated At the Dreamland to-day.

Mrs. Hugh Veale and little daughter left last night for Chicago, after having spent ten days in this city with friends and relatives. They will spend a few days in Chicago with relatives and then return to their home in Taylor, Texas. Mrs. Veale and family were former residents of Barre, having resided on East street extension for several years. They went from here to Texas eight years ago, so she noticed many changes in Barre since that time. Mrs. Veale has many friends in this city, who greeted her with warm affection. Since coming north, she has visited her parents in Westbury, R. I., relatives in Quincy, Mass., friends in Belfast, Me., and came from there to Northfield, where she spent several days with her brother and his family, coming from her family at her home about the first of November.
